Dear Colleagues and Friends,

When blood supply is compromised, wounds fail to heal, and the threat of amputation looms, limb salvage demands innovation, collaboration, and evidence-based solutions.

It is my pleasure to welcome you to this important inaugural first international scientific meeting dedicated to Tibial Transverse Transport (TTT)—an evolving approach that has generated considerable interest for its potential role in managing patients with compromised circulation and complex, nonhealing wounds.

As we advance our understanding of this technique, it is essential that we critically examine the science, evaluate the available evidence, share our clinical experiences, and identify the questions that future research must address.

This meeting offers a valuable opportunity to bring together experts and colleagues to exchange ideas, discuss challenges, and explore the evolving role of TBT/TTT in limb preservation.

I invite you to join us for an engaging and thought-provoking scientific experience as we work together to advance knowledge and improve outcomes for patients facing some of the most challenging problems in limb salvage.

Warm regards,

– Prof. Vinod Panchbhavi, First-Term ISTTT President
